5 . Features of University
History of Nagoya University: Nagoya University was founded in 1871, when the medical school with a hospital were established on the site of a local feudal council building in Nagoya. In April 1939, the university received its charter as Japan’s seventh Imperial University. After the second world war, in the general post-war reform of the nation’s educational system, Nagoya University was given a leadership role in the Chubu region, and has grown into one of the foremost national universities in Japan. Currently, Nagoya University, in its totality, has nine faculties, thirteen graduate schools, three affiliated research institutes, and numerous research centers. There are approximately 9,700 undergraduate students, 6,000 post-graduate students enrolled and 1,200 overseas students in total in the entire university. About 3,200 teaching staffs work at the university. Introduction to Nagoya: Nagoya city, the prefectural capital of Aichi Prefecture, is located in the southwest of the central Japan. With a population of about 2 million, it is the forth-largest city in Japan. Being a core region for Japan’s industrial technology, the city is prosperous with, for example, automobile industry represented by Toyota Motor Corporation. The city of Nagoya is also a cultural city with a long history.

6 . Features of Graduate school
The Graduate School of Law at Nagoya University is unique from other universities in Japan in that it is engaged in international cooperation for the provision of legal systems in various Asian countries undertaking the transition to a market economy and constitutional and democratic nation-states. In line with this, our School has taken in many overseas students, including JDS fellows from these countries to assist in their training as legal professionals. These students are provided with teaching and research supervision from our academic staff members. Currently there are 107 overseas students enrolled in the Graduate School of Law. Around 50 of these students have entered through the master’s program of the “The Human Resources Development program to Contribute to the Asian Technical Legal Assistance Projects” for professional training. All lectures are in English and their master’s thesis is also required to be written in English for these students. This program taught in English is directed towards persons who will return to their own country after completing the program to be engaged in the reform of their domestic legal and political systems or in the education of the students and civil service staff in the field of law and political science. Applicants must choose one topic related to the following academic areas which the applicant wishes to study for Master’s Thesis.
<table border="1"> <tr> <td>Civil law Civil procedure law Criminal law Criminal Procedure Commercial law Labor law Intellectual property law Social security law Competition law</td> <td>Constitutional law Administrative law International public law International economic law International private law Comparative law Comparative property law Legal philosophy Legal sociology Legal history (France) Legal history (Japan)</td> <td>International politics Political history (Japan) Political history (Europe) Political science and public administration History of political thought (Asia) Political science</td> </tr> </table>	Civil law Civil procedure law Criminal law Criminal Procedure Commercial law Labor law Intellectual property law Social security law Competition law	Constitutional law Administrative law International public law International economic law International private law Comparative law Comparative property law Legal philosophy Legal sociology Legal history (France) Legal history (Japan)	International politics Political history (Japan) Political history (Europe) Political science and public administration History of political thought (Asia) Political science

Important: Before applying: For the applicants, it is most important to demonstrate that he/she can write his/her own thesis with passable achievement within the designated time frame. Thus, please take note that admissions office focuses on the following factors of each applicant. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) Whether the applicant has specialized, professional knowledge and skills relating to his/her topic to start his/her own research substantively as soon as entering to the Graduate School; 2) Whether he/she can submit a detailed, clear and convincing research proposal. To write a master’s thesis within 2 years, students usually need to make substantive investigation in the first year, based on a sufficiently clear vision on the range and points to examine (gathering necessary documents or papers in the following year, and another half year in actual writing in order, is the usual timeline for the master’s); 3) Whether there is a necessity to study especially in Japan; 4) In relation to the above item 3), whether the candidate has some degree of knowledge concerning the Japanese situation or institutions in the targeted field; and,

5) Graduate-level instruction involves direct supervision by a member of academic staff. Applicants to the LL.M. and LL.D. programs should therefore carefully review both the supervision burdens of faculty in their intended area of study, and any specific reading materials or preparation suggestions indicated in the faculty profiles of relevant staff members. The primary reference for this purpose is the Supervision arrangements page on the GSL website: <http://gsl-nagoya-u.net/faculty/supervision.html> Applicants for subject areas which are heavily subscribed should note that admission in these cases is particularly competitive. Factors of particular importance in such cases include: A detailed, clear and convincing research proposal; and a demonstrated track record of independent research. (evidenced by research papers or academic publications).

7 . Features of the Program

LL.M. (Comparative Law) Program in Law and Political Science: “The Human Resources Development program to Contribute to the Asian Technical Legal Assistance Projects,” Nagoya University Graduate School of Law (GSL), Japan

Objective of the Program: “The Human Resources Development Program to Contribute to Asian Technical Legal Assistance Projects” is carried out by the Graduate School of Law. Its objective is to foster human resources capable to contribute to the development of legal systems mainly in Asian countries which have been in the process of transition to a market-oriented model of economics, a democratic system of politics, and a civil society governed by the rule of law. The program provides professional and academic training to those personnel in the Asia-Pacific region who are expected to work for reforming their domestic legal and political systems or to be engaged in educating and training future legal professionals. This has brought the number of students entering each year including JDS fellows and the students of the Monbukagaku-sho (MEXT) Scholarship Program.

Overview: Students enter Nagoya University in October of each year, after being matched with a faculty supervisor, spend the first six months in the program studying Japanese language intensively at the Nagoya University Education Center for International Students (ECIS), along with tutorial from each supervisor and attending introductory courses to Japanese society. After completing the six months of Japanese training, in April of the following year, students formally enroll in the LL.M. (Comparative Law) Program in Law and Political Science at GSL and begin their legal studies in earnest.

Features of the Program: The distinctive features of this program are; 1) provision of a variety of course options from which students may choose; 2) focused instruction in research methods and academic writing, through a suite of Academic Writing courses that run the length of the program in support of the thesis writing process, and 3) individual and specialized tutorials with supervisory professor in the subject area of each candidate, in close coordination with the academic writing courses referred to above.

A unique course titled “Peer Support Initiative (PSI): Comparative Legal and Political Studies” is offered to the students of this program. This PSI course provides an opportunity for Japanese and overseas students to carry out cooperative study/research in small independent groups made up of both overseas and Japanese students. Advisors for this program will include academic staff not only from our School but also from overseas partner universities, as well as the graduates from our school who has returned to home countries. Languages to be used in the program is Japanese, English and where deemed appropriate, the languages of the respective overseas students. The goal of this program is to promote and develop future human networks in worldwide.

9 . Degree

Degree of Master of Laws (Comparative Law)

Note :

10 . Credit needed for graduation

No credit is offered during the period as research students for the first six months. To obtain a master's degree, you need to get at least 30 Credits during the period of master's program. Duration of the master's program is two Years.

Note :

To obtain a master degree, students are required both to attend courses including 10 credits from the compulsory subjects; Special Research I, Special Research II, and Academic Writing I. Completion of 30 credits of study and writing a Master's thesis in English under faculty supervision are requisites to obtain a master's degree. The program consists of optional and compulsory courses. Regular courses are conducted in lecture, seminar and practice formats. In seminars, students are expected to prepare a research topic and present their findings to colleagues and faculty. Grades are assessed mainly from presentations and in class discussions. There will be periodic study tours of courts and local government offices.

During February: Exchange Ski program for international students

During March: Study away trip to Hiroshima, etc.

The end of March: Farewell party

12 . Facilities

Accommodation: Newly enrolled students from abroad are generally accommodated in one of the university international residence. However, the number of international students greatly exceeds the capacity available, so we can only provide a limited number of places, mostly to newcomers, for a maximum period of one year. Students cannot be guaranteed their first choice of accommodation in every case.

University International Residences: Nagoya University provides three dormitories for international students: the International Residence (on campus); the Foreign Students House (off campus); and the newly constructed International Ohmei Kan (off campus) for exchange and Japanese students.

International Student Center: This is another dormitory established through the collaboration of Nagoya City and Aichi Prefecture. Its goal is to accommodate international students and to promote exchanges between these students and local residents.

Facilities:

Law Library: The Law Library placed in our School contains approximately 200,000 volumes of books in the field of law and political science, including approximately 76,000 volumes in foreign languages. An additional 550 Japanese issued periodicals and 330 foreign periodicals of our school are available in the University Central Library. The Law School Library, along with other satellite collections within the University, is covered by OPAC system and, for older books, the comprehensive card catalog housed in the Central Library.

Legal Research and Computerized Service: Internet access is available for postgraduate students through terminals in the Legal Information Center, through network points in study carrels, or through terminals in the Law Library and the Central Library. Courses in Legal Informatics, including instruction in the use of online research tools, are available for undergraduate and postgraduate students. All graduate students get free unlimited use of LEXIS-NEXIS, a cutting edge Legal Research database. The School also offers LEXIS-NEXIS training.

The Central Library of Nagoya University: The Central Library, which processes all library materials and maintains the union catalog of all books in the university, also offers circulation and reference services, including inter-library loan, photocopying, and computer-based information retrieval. In the Central Library building there are 950,000 volumes and 17,000 periodicals. All library materials are accessible on open shelving except for special collection and microform materials. Circulation is managed by an ID card system and book detection system. For language education and other educational and research purposes, the Central Library has access to satellite TV channels, including CNN news, CCTVa, and KBSa. The Central Library contains 1,000 reading desks in the open-stack area. Group study rooms, a seminar room, an information corner, and an audio-visual room are also available.

Note

SOLV Supporting daily life of GSL overseas students:

The undergraduate students of the School of Law has set up a student association (School of Law Volunteers: SOLV) in 1999 to support overseas students adjust to life at Nagoya University and to enjoy cross-cultural exchange to building up relationships between overseas and Japanese students. SOLV activities range from holding cross-cultural party, study groups to helping overseas study and coordinating student exchange programs.
